Program Report on: Gender Sensitivity program

Date: 07/6/2020

Venu: Vilas Tambe Women's college of Education

Participant: Student, Faculty, Staff

Objectives: To develop a deeper understanding of the roles of women and men in Society,

Introduction-

Gender is a critical factor that determines an individual's role and status. Because women and men have different roles and utilize the resources of their environment differently, development and environmental programs affect women and men differently. The common assumption is that the whole household or community will benefit equally from such program, but this is rarely the case. Different people have different roles and status in a household and in a community, which can favor or hinder their capacity to access information, obtain new opportunities, and make decisions. Hence, the needs and interests of women and men are different, but both are important to consider in a program in order to address mountain development and contribute to the improvement of mountain people's wellbeing. Thus, it is important to develop gender sensitive program and monitor their impacts with methodologies and gender sensitive

Through mental health.

Introduction-

Mental health is a state of mental well-being that enables people to cope with the stresses of life, realize their abilities, learn well and work well, and contribute to their community. It is an integral component of health and well-being that underpins our individual and collective abilities to make decisions, build relationships and shape the world we live in. Stress is part of being human, and it can help motivate you to get things done. Even high stress from serious illness, job loss, a death in the family, or a painful life event can be a natural part of life. You may feel down or anxious, and that's normal too for a while. If you feel down or anxious for more than. Therapy, medication, and other strategies can help.
