Date:07/6/2020

Venu:VilastambeWomens college of Education

Participant: Student ,Faculty ,Staff

Objectives:To developing a deeper understanding of the roles of women and men in Society,

Introduction-

Gender is a critical factor that determines an individual's role and status. Because women and men have different roles and utilize the resources of their environment differently, development and environmental programs affect women and men differently. The common assumption is that the whole household or community will benefit equally from such program, but this is rarely the case. Different people have different roles and status in a household and in a community, which can favor or hinder their capacity to access information, obtain new opportunities, and make decisions. Hence, the needs and interests of women and men are different, but both are important to consider in a program in order to address mountain development and contribute to the improvement of mountain people's wellbeing. Thus, it is important to develop gender sensitive program and monitor their impacts with methodologies and gender sensitive
